Summary

Stewart Lawler has worked as a consultant to the development industry since 1992 and has trained NCHP personnel from 2001 to 2008 in Property Development as part of a team from the University of Sydney. This training formed the basis of research for a thesis titled 'Building Property Development capacity in the NSW CHP sector'. He was also part of some capacity building undertaken by the NSW Community housing peak.

Stewart was an academic at University of Sydney lecturing in Housing and Feasibility subjects in the graduate program for Urban Planners and Property in the Built Environment to Final year Architecture students. He has a good understanding of the nature of the Community Housing sector and how their requirements differ from standard residential development.

Stewart currently works as a Property Consultant to Keneco Property undertaking Project Management of building works and advising on Property Development projects.
